United States until the end of the 1940s (calendar year). Town & Country was also sold as a sedan, coupe and convertible in 1947-1950 and 1983-1986. 1988 was the last model year for the Chrysler Town & Country station wagon, and then partly for one model year (1989) the name Town & Country was out of the market until the 1990 model year, when Chrysler once again introduced a renamed version of the minivan Chrysler Town & Country. The Chrysler Town & Country wagon featured a wood panel on the sides and rear of the body, a feature that has also been associated with competing station wagons such as the AMC Ambassador, Buick Estate, Oldsmobile Custom Cruiser, Ford Country Squire, and Mercury Colony Park. Chrysler once again introduced the Town & Country name as a luxury renamed Dodge Grand Caravan / Plymouth Grand Voyager minivan for 1990 and continued to sell this incarnation of Chrysler Town & Country until 2017, when Chrysler once again introduced the Pacifica name for its minivan. The exterior wood trim panel has reappeared on other Chrysler products, such as the Jeep Grand Cherokee and the Chrysler PT Cruiser. Originally scheduled for the 1989 model year, Chrysler Town & Country returned in the Spring of 1989 as an introduction to the early 1990 model year, but this time, it was part of a new line of luxury minivans Chrysler Town & Country, based on Dodge Grand Caravan and Plymouth Grand Voyager. each was added to Chrysler's line of minivans. Chrysler Town & Country was discontinued in 1998, and was replaced by the Chrysler Pacifica. The Chrysler Town & Country name was used on a number of other Chrysler vehicles, including the Chrysler PT Cruiser.
