Achei 2B Bonito e Barato, mas nao achei BOM!!! quando comprei, cheguei em casa e fui testalo, liguei ele direto no amp Laney Cub10, que eh valvulado com a guita na outra ponta sem mais ninguem assim guitarra volume amp e funcionou as mil maravilhas, mas senti que meu amp perdeu seu brilho, e forca nos drives. Nao sei ao certo mas eu li no site da Boss que esse pedal seria util para captadores ativos os seus sao. E pelo que entendi, voce pode contornar esse problema se seu captador for passivo conectando um pedal com buffer, provavelmente antes do de volume. Sabe o que eu fiz pra resolver o problema Vendi o pedal. Esse problema e bem comum desse pedal. Nao vendi ele, mas esta aqui encostado, como se fosse algo imprestavel.

Cara eu acho que nao, se fosse o 330H acho que roubaria sinal e ainda colocaria um pouco mais de ruido na sua cadeia. Vc ta numa sinuca de bico, se vc precisa de um pedal de volume, a primeira coisa que eu pensaria e pesquisar um pedal de volume que nao tenha esse problema, venderia esse e compraria o outro. Esse Boss sinceramente foi uma decepcao pra mim, ele tem um visual bacana, bem resistente, mas em compensacao jogava meu timbre no lixo. Serio mesmo, quando botava ele na cadeia de pedais meu som brochava. Melhor coisa que eu fiz foi vender ele. Eu procuraria outra marca, na minha humilde opiniao. Nao leve isso como uma verdade universal, mas e sempre bom pesquisar sobre isso antes de comprar. Pois e, pela especificacao no site da Boss, esse pedal seria indicado para captadores ativos, como falei acima. Voce tem algum pedal que nao seja true bypass pra colocar antes desse Boss FV 300L e testar Abs No meu setup, ele e o penultimo, antes do delay. Antes dele, tenho distorcoes, wah, modulacoes, booster e uso ele para segurar e dar dinamica no que esta antes. Andei lendo por ai, que o ernie ball e o melhor, porem ele tem um problema de desgaste de conexoes que pode dar em qualquer tempo, dependendo do uso. No FV300H, as unicas coisas que fiz foram lubrificacao e ajuste normal. Nao troco ele.
