From Todd Bowerman | Jupiterimages / Goodshoot / Getty Images Thanks to the ease of carrying out a conversation of text messages on the iPhone, it doesn't take a long time to create a message log along with each of your friends and co-workers. The iPhone only displays a limited number of messages at a time to keep the load times short, but you can go back through each text conversation you had seen until you have deleted messages. Go to the beginning of a particularly long chat can take time but only requires the touch of a finger. Open the conversation you like to read in your iPhone app  "Messages". Touch the upper part of the screen, where the time is displayed, to scroll to the top of the conversation display. Touch  "Upload previous messages" to see the messages that are not currently displayed. Scroll up to the top of the older messages and use the button again  "Load previous messages. Repeat these steps to return to the Start of the conversation. From Avery Martin | Justin Sullivan / Getty Images News / Getty Images The iMessage app provides a way to send encrypted messages to other iMessage users. Text messaging can support additional commissions for text and does not use encryption, While iMessage uses cellular data to send messages. Sending messages exclusively to text Requires to completely disable Wi-Fi connection and cellular data or modification King some settings within the settings app. Although iMessage provides a simple and cheap way to send messages, sometimes it does not work as a standard text message. You can set the default to always use text-based messages or use a quick solution to send an iMessage text failed using SMS. Select the "Messages" option. Set the "iMESSAGE" switching switch to the "OFF" position. Set the "MMS Messaging" switching switch to the "OFF" position if you want to disable text messages, even the audio features, photos and videos and videos. Touch the message app and send text message to a supported mobile phone. Touch the settings app and select the "Wi-Fi" option. Set the switch to deactivate "Wi-Fi" on the "OFF" position. Tap the "Settings" button at the top of the screen to return to the settings page. Choose the "General" option. Select "Mobile" from the list of options. Set the switch to deactivate cell data to the "OFF" position. Send your text message as normal. Provided that the text to a phone that supports the  Shortcuts ) In every app where you excel before iOS 5, you had to do jailbreak to get a text expand to work throughout the iOS. TextExpander, a third-party app (and ex pick pick) tried to bring to type Shortcuts as many more apps as possible but could not get system-wide integration due to the numerous restrictions of Apple. While I would prefer a third-party solution more of functionality that integrates the expansion of the text to iOS, Apple at least gave us something with the section of iOS connections 5. While offering only simple typing shortcuts and no other characteristic, it must be our highest choice because it works In each app. The expansion of the text is really just a great feature when you can use it, after all. (By the way, if you want to learn how to use it read this.) Where the main negative side is falling in short is a lack of functions. All you get is the expansion of the base text. In many cases, this is enough, but we like the possibility of adding variables as data date Time, Put Snippet inside snippet, organize and many other other things you get with a desktop text expansion app. There is no reason why this cannot be done on iOS, and TextExpander offers a variety of other functionality, but nothing else integrates the broad system because Apple will not allow it. The CompetextExpander ($ 5, often for sale for less) has been our top choice before Apple added shortcuts to be typed in iOS 5. While TextExpander cannot integrate on the system level, it provides variable support and synchronizes with the Desktop version. A fair number of other third-party apps also support it, so you are not retained for the TextExpander app itself. All in all, it's the best solution ... it doesn't work everywhere and therefore you can't be our Pick Pick plus.Tapt4me, the mobile version of our best choice for text expansion on the Mac costs the same $ 5 as TextXpander but it doesn't even give you the iPad version. It has some beautiful features like direct tweeting, but for the most part it's not as good as TextXPander. It also does not have third-party app support. Nevertheless, it's another option if you're looking for one. For jailbreakers, Xpandr ($ 2) actually provides system support for text expansion fragments. So you want to expand the text to work on iPhone. We did not make our main choice because it is a rather simple app that does not come with too many characteristics and, above all, not everyone is jailbroken, but if you are the way to go.
