With the use of Flash technology, you can play the popular TV quiz game right in the web browser. Go to a website that has Family Feud available in Flash, such as GameFools.com and Games.com. Some sites may ask you to log in so you can get your name on the board if you win, but others allow you to play right away. Click on the Family Feud game page and wait for Flash to load the game data. Once the game has been loaded, press the "Start" button. You will be taken to the first round of the game, where you have to guess as many answers to a single question as possible in 20 seconds. The questions are usually trivial or opinion-related, and the answers are those most often given when asked by 100 people. Type the reply and press "Submit" or the Enter key on your keyboard. Once you guess three times wrong, or get all the right answers, your score will be high and you will be taken to the next round. The second round is the same format but with a different question, perhaps more difficult. Questions range from things like, "What do people do when you shoot?" to "What's a good gift for a pirate?" When the round is over, your two scores will be added together. The third and fourth rounds are played the same, but the scores in the third round are doubled, and those in the fourth round are tripled. The last round of the game is called "Big Money." Instead of multiple answers to a question, you will be asked five questions in one minute. You will then be asked the same questions a second time, but you have to give different answers. Your score is based on how many people answered each question the same way as you did. For example, if the answer to a question is "Baseball", and 60 people answered "Baseball", you earn 60 points. If you manage to get 200 points or more, you will get 20,000 bonus points and win.
