CC0/StockSnap/Pixabay If your TV has developed mechanical defects or is well beyond its time, it may be time to dispose of it. Maybe you have bought a new TV, which boasts the latest technological features. Getting rid of the old TV will create space for the new piece of entertainment technology in your home. A modern TV makes events like watching football with friends much more enjoyable. While you might be tempted to put your old TV in the trash, getting rid of your TV is not so easy. The laws on the disposal of electronic waste must be taken into account. In addition, you may be able to find a second home for your unwanted television. Consequently, giving away your TV might be the best way to get rid of it. Why? © Throwing away your TV could be illegal The first main reason you can't just throw away your old TV is that it's probably illegal, even if it depends on your state. Television sets, like many other electronic gadgets, contain potentially harmful toxins. This makes their safe disposal a matter of public safety. The televisions contain lead, copper, mercury, cadmium and other dangerous materials. Because of the toxic nature of the materials used in television production, many states now have laws governing their proper disposal. For example, the state of Hawaii covers it in its electronic law on recycling devices and television. Similarly, Vermont has the status of Vermont E-Cycles, which provides for the recycling of electronic equipment. These laws across the country generally prohibit the dumping of televisions, computers and other electronic equipment. The correct disposal of your old unit is TV can cost up to $100, maybe more. This because © you have to deliver the TV a manufacturer or another electronic disposal company. These companies have programs to process old electronic equipment. Materials such as copper and metals will be melted and reused in the manufacture of other goods. Other materials such as glass separated from metals and reused for other purposes. However, this process is expensive. For the end user, the annoying part is that disposing of your TV in this way will sometimes cost as much as buying a brand new TV. This is another good reason to give away the TV whenever possible. Give Your TV away to Goodwill or Salvation ArmyThe first option to give away your TV is to donate it, if possible, to a local charity store. For example, in the past, organizations such as Goodwill and the Salvation Army have run programs where televisions could be donated. They would then donate these TVs to local families who wanted a TV but were too poor to afford it. Given the new laws on the disposal of electronics, charities may refuse electronic items that are too old. This is to avoid disposal costs if you are not able to deliver the item yourself. However, you should ask the charities in your area to see if the TV is suitable for them. Giving Your TV Away As a free give away on Craigslist in case you are not able to give away your TV to a charity, you can often sell your TV on Craigslist or other online marketplaces. Even better, list the item as a free giveaway. Craigslist gives you access to a vast audience of people in your city. TV could be a great discovery for a young man in your area who wants one but can't afford the latest models. When listing the item, specify that the recipient will have to come and pick up the item from your home, this way you don't have to pay shipping to send the TV to them. Give your TV away to a neighbor or arrange a Yard-SaleA last option to give away your TV is to give it away to a neighbor or arrange a yard sale. With a market, neighbours and other locals are invited to At your home on a predetermined date. You can often sell unwanted objects like old furniture, TV, washing machines and many others. Know, though, that with a market market There will probably be many things below market value. This is a problem if you are going to sell valuable items. However, if you have an unwanted old TV, this is a good way to take it a new home without costing money for disposal. More from Life123.com When you update your TV, you are likely to be the proud owner of more TVs than you want or need. In this case, look for disposal options, which include recycling. Provision of large electronics list falls into the category of large electronics. These devices are the things that fit into electrical outlets and require special disposal methods to make sure that they do not sit in dumps. Televisions, amps, printers, computers and other large devices have internal components that need to be removed and recycled. If the television is older with a cathode-ray tube, it contains mercury and dangerous lead. Most donation centers do not accept these older models, and you need to find a recycling center that specifically accepts them. If your television is a smart TV, reset it to factory settings so that none of your personal information remains in The system.bundle the cable neatly and fix it with a rubber band or a twist tie. Tap the cable bundled on television. Plus the TV to see if it works. When you take it to a recycling center, it will probably be asked if it works or does not work. Our local community can offer a waste recycling program blocked for residents. If available, you may be able to plan a pick-up or you may be able to take your old TV in a recycling center. Some communities offer this service without fees, but others may charge you to recycle yourTV. If you don't have an option for recycling with your community, try a recovery program. Some manufacturers and retailers offer services to accept or pick up electronics, and this service may be free or may incur a commission. Call your TV manufacturer or some retailers in area to see if this is an option too. Find an E-StewardE-Stewards are responsible waste pickers located throughout the country. The goal of e-Stewards is to recycle using the highest standards, which usually do not include exporting e-waste and reuse or renovate when possible. Visit the e-Stewards website to find a participating center near you where you can drop off your TV. The search tool on the site allows you to search with your zip code. Other Disposal Options If your TV still works, consider donating it instead of recycling it. Many non-profit organizations accept television as a work order. Or, you could donate to a reuse organization that will turn it over and give it away to an organization or individual that will use it. QUESTIONS FOR QUESTIONS OF QUESTIONS
