But, before I did that I deleted the old files (before deleting I had saved a copy onto my computer). We use open source maps downloaded to our Garmin GPS. Remove that file (make a copy of anything you are deleting before deletion as you may need it later). Choice 1 - a predefined country • Using the drop down choices pick your country and depending on size you might be able to immediately download the file • Example, using the Asia drop down, choose "Laos" and then at step 4 (request map) you will see "download map now" link on the screen immediately. • Click on the download map now link and another window will open • Download the file with the name "osm_generic_new_gmapsup.zip" and the description says "compressed file containing a single image that can be placed directly onto the SD card of the GPS". Troubleshooting: • The main issue that can happen is that the map isn't working. If this is a map you have purchased then save it your computer. Find the map you want to use ("OSM generic routable (new style)"), select it in order to "enable it" • Any other maps you have on your device, you need to select and choose "disable" otherwise there can possibly be mapping conflicts. We are forever indebted to him for showing us how to do this. He needed his map to be in French. I got help doing this from a YouTube video after searching for adding languages to a Garmin. I was able to go back and move over the language files onto his Garmin from the folder I had taken off. • Put your SD card in your computer and make a folder with the name "Garmin"; do not give it any other name or it won't work • If you are using the SD card that was already in your Garmin then open that folder marked "Garmin" and delete the image file that is in the folder. It saved us lots of money since we didn't have to purchase the maps from Garmin and the open source maps are updated more frequently. Step 7: Put map on the SD card for your Garmin • You now have the file. For example, I built maps of all the Southeast Asia countries I wanted to drive through. If there is another file named "garmin" then this is where your conflict is occurring. Do not change the file name in any way; if you do then it won't work. Using Open Source Street Maps for use on a Garmin Step 1: Go to Open Street Map Website: Step 2: Choose your map type - click "generic routable (new style)" Step 3: You have two choices at this point - you can download a pre-defined country or build your own custom map. I have passed on the how-to steps to individuals along the way and wanted to share the information more broadly. • Turn on device • Scroll until you find tab called “setup”, click on that • Scroll until you find tab called “map”, click to open • Select button that says “map information” (may also say select map) click to open • In this field you will see all maps that are on the device. The usual issue is that the Garmin is confused because there is more than one map on the Garmin. What I didn’t realize is that the old file had contained information that would put the map image into different languages. If it still isn’t working then plug your Garmin into your computer and look at the files on its hard drive. A friend taught us how to download free maps to our GPS when we were in Mexico. • Once you have selected your area then request your map Step 4: Requesting your map • Fill in your email address and click build my map • After your click “build my map” another window will open that says you will receive two emails Step 5: Receiving your map • The first email you receive will tell you that your map is in process and provide a link that you can check when it will be ready or its status • The second email you receive will give you a link to go download your map Step 6: Downloading your map • Click on the link in the email • Download the file with the name “osm_generic_new_gmapsupp.zip” and the description says “compressed file containing a single image that can be placed directly onto the SD card of the GPS”. On my MAC it downloads as an image and not as a zip file so it is easy to place in the folder; this might be different on a PC. • Move the new file/image that you downloaded onto the SD card into the folder marked “Garmin” • Put the SD card back into your Garmin and you now have your new map Step 8: On your Garmin device • Insert the SD card into your Garmin device (or turn off/on if you saved to the device hard drive). Note: download map now does not always work so see step 4. • I did this on one person’s Garmin device that didn’t have an SD card so we were putting the new map image into a “garmin” folder on the hard drive. So, here we present step-by-step instructions. Choice 2 - build your own map • Click the box “enable tile selection” • Then using the map area below – use the up and down arrows to move around the world map and the + or – to zoom in or out – click on the tiles you want. You have already made sure that the SD card has only one image and that the folder is called “garmin” and there shouldn’t be any other folders on that SD card.
