The song is re-adapted from the track of the same name in 1986 Bollywood film Janbaaz which is picturised on Feroz Khan and Sridevi.[4] The original version penned by Indeevar was sung by Manhar Udhas and Sadhana Sargam and was composed by music director duo Kalyanji-Anandji.[3] The renewed version of the song, re-mixed by Chirantan Bhatt has Shiv Panditt and Aditi Rao Hydari in the video. Daily News and Analysis. Moreover, he needed the version to be as different from the other songs in the film.[10] According to Sinha, "Nobody can recreate the kind of magic that [Sri Devi] did in that song".[11] For the version Kumar requested producer of the film, Ashwin Varde for ten white horses to be appeared in the song but completed the shoot with five of them. Khush-Naseeb Hain Hum.. Tum Mein Hum Hain, Hum Mein Tum Ho.. "Boss Music Review". ^ a b Mohar Basu (12 September 2013). "Why do I need a makeover?". Mumbai Mirror. Calling the song "an offensive gesture", Basu was disappointed "when young musicians rehab older tracks to make an entirely distorted version of it".[14] Similarly, Bryan Durham from The Times of India felt the song is "average" compared to the original.[15] Bollywood Hungama's Rajiv Vijayakar analysed that "Manoj Yadav's lyrics are not a patch on Indeevar's brilliant verse, and D'Souza's gasping, very Western rendition is also not in sync with the basic melody".[16] Solo version Joginder Tuteja writing for Rediff.com felt the version "leaves an impact" with the company of both vocalists.[13] Same as for the solo version, Bollywood Hungama's Rajiv Vijayakar panned the version calling it "equally undistinguished" and criticising the "gimmicky high-pitched vocals". In the song Rao is presented in a bikini for which she responds; "I knew that my bikini shoot will never look cheap but pretty and sensual instead. ^ "Akshay rides jet-ski for 'Boss' promotion".
