When life gets tough, many people turn to tabletop games like Dungeons & Dragons as an escape from reality. One group of players recently started playing and are enjoying their "freshman romp" through a fantasy world. For those new to D&D, it can be difficult to find the right adventure to play, but Wizards of the Coast is making things easier by offering free adventures and resources on its website every day this week and next. These include campaigns like Defiance in Phlan, Secrets of Sokol Keep, Shadows Over the Moonsea, and Encounters in Avermuss, as well as other bonuses such as free pre-generated character sheets and coloring pages. WOTC hasn't announced when it will stop offering these free goods, but they advise checking back regularly through April 17 to collect them. Even though certain offerings are time-limited, it's a good idea to download everything now, including the Lost Mine of Phandelver adventure, which is also available for free elsewhere. If you're eager to start a Dungeons & Dragons adventure with friends, there's no need to wait for official releases or expensive materials.
