[rocks MetalzoneDec 13, 20242 min readUpdated: Jan 11SYSTEM OF A DOWN has announced three massive stadium events featuring DEFTONES, AVENGED SEVENFOLD and KORN. Produced by Live Nation, the performances will take place at MetLife Stadium in East Rutherford, New Jersey on August 28 with KORN; Soldier Field in Chicago, Illinois on August 31 with AVENGED SEVENFOLD; and conclude at Rogers Stadium in Toronto, Ontario on September 3 with DEFTONES. Special guests POLYPHIA and WISP will open for all three shows.Tickets will be available starting with an artist presale beginning on Wednesday, December 11. Additional presales will run throughout the week ahead of the general on-sale beginning on Friday, December 13 at 12 p.m. local time at LiveNation.com.In a recent interview with São Paulo, Brazil's 89 FM A Rádio Rock radio station, SYSTEM OF A DOWn drummer John Dolmayan and bassist Shavarsh "Shavo" Odadjian once again spoke about the possibility of the band one day making a follow-up to its "Mezmerize" and "Hypnotize" LPs, which came out in 2005. The Serj Tankian-fronted outfit has toured intermittently since ending its hiatus in 2011 but has yet to record any new music. John said: "I wouldn't count on a SYSTEM OF A DOWn album anytime soon. It's very unlikely that it will happen, but if it does happen, it'll be because it's organic and the four of us just decide one day that, okay, we don't care about what happened in the past. We don't care if we had differences, either artistically or emotionally. We're just gonna get together and do it, and it'll be something that happens spontaneously. Because if we try to plan it, the anxiety involved with that will be too much. It'll splinter the band too much."Shavo chimed in: "It's been built up too much. The time that has passed is so long, so much that I feel like if it were to happen, like [John] said, it would have to happen without thinking: 'Let's do it.' We go in, we don't announce it, we don't talk about it, we do it, and then you hear it without a big news about it. It's the only way."John added: "We do have songs that we worked on several years ago, and they're pretty incredible."Shavo said: "We have it. No one else has it. It's not recorded."System of a Down Announces 2025 tour dates:August 28, 2025 - New York City, NY (MetLife Stadium)August 31, 2025 - Chicago, Illinois (Soldier Field)September 3, 2025 - Toronto, Ontario (Rogers Stadium)System of a Down have announced a Spring 2025 South American tour, marking their first live appearances on the continent since 2015. The outing includes seven shows and kicks off April 24th in Bogotá, Colombia. SOAD will then play gigs in Peru, Chile, and Argentina before three concerts in Brazil. First time seeing them, and they sounded incredible. One of my all time favorite shows so far. I was in the pit, second row, I waited 7 hours just to see them. I arrived at 3:30 and they didn't come on until 10:30pm, but they played almost 2 hours so it was fine. I waited in the second row without moving much. Once SOAD came on, the crowd pushed like crazy and got very wild. As a 5'0 female weighing about 115lbs, I thought I was going to suffocate, get squished to death, or get a limb broken. I DO NOT recommend the pit for people as small as me. I was pushing as hard as I could just to get a breathe of air. I was legitimately fighting/pushing to survive/breathe at one point. I eventually was able to grab on to the front row rail and get some air, but even then my body was being pushed up against the rail. I wouldn't have been surprised if I had broken a rib or an arm, because that's how much pain I was in by being pushed against the rail/people. People did not care if they hurt others and some were extremely rude. People who were barely arriving tried to push/shove their way to the front, trying to get in front of people who had been waiting 7 hours. The crowd was very crazy, people fighting and pushing each other left and right. Dozens of people were taken out by security, either because they were being too pushy/wild or because they were suffocating. I have been to dozens of music festivals ranging from EDM, hip hop, to rock music, no crowd has ever been as bad as this. I expected the pit to be bad, but never imagined that I would be fighting for my life. Overall, system of a down played an unforgettable show, but the crowd unfortunately, greatly ruined the experience for me. Will not be buying a pit ticket again, at least not for a band like SOAD. Read more Report as inappropriate System Of A Down kicked off their most ambitious run of shows in years last night, April 24th, with a massive 34-song set at Estadio El Campín in Bogotá, Colombia. The multi-platinum Armenian-American nü-metal legends brought out deep cuts, rarities, and fan favorites—some of which hadn't been performed live in nearly two decades. The set included the traditional cover "Der Voghormia", and marked the return of tracks like "Attack" (first time since 2015), "Violent Pornography" (first time since 2019), "Marmalade" (first time since 2019), "Marmalade" (first time since 2015), and "Streamline", which hadn't seen the light of day since 2005. Tras una pausa en 2005, la banda se reunió en 2011 para giras esporádicas y festivales europeos y conciertos como cabezas de cartel. Aunque se han generado rumores sobre un nuevo álbum que seguiría a sus aclamados discos de 2005, Mezmerize e Hypnotize, no hay confirmación oficial de un sexto trabajo discográfico. Sin embargo, la emoción por verlos en vivo sigue tan fuerte como siempre. System of a Down, sometimes shortened to System and abbreviated as SOAD, is an Armenian-American heavy metal band from Glendale, California, formed in 1994. The band currently consists of Serj Tankian (lead vocals, keyboards), Daron Malakian (vocals, guitar), Shavo Odadjian (bass, backing vocals) and John Dolmayan (drums).The band achieved commercial success with the release of five studio albums, three of which debuted at number one on the Billboard 200. System of a Down has been nominated for four Grammy Awards, and their song "B.Y.O.B." won the Best Hard Rock Performance of 2006. The group briefly disbanded in August 2006 and reunited in November 2010, embarking on a tour for the following three years. System of a Down has sold over 40 million records worldwide. Their performances in Toronto mark the first hard rock act to play two nights at the brand new Rogers Stadium. Special guests POLYPHIA and WISP will open for all shows.Back in May, SYSTEM OF A DOWn frontman Serj Tankian spoke to the Soul Boom podcast about his reluctance to embrace the touring lifestyle that characterized the band's early years. He said: "We've had incredible, unexpected success as a very far-flung kind of progressive metal band with our 'Toxicity' record in 2001 and touring and doing what we did. And after many years of touring, when we were making the last few records which we made together, 'Mezmerize' and 'Hypnotize' — those recordings were done at the same time, then released as two records within six months of each other in 2005 and 2006 — before those sessions, when we first started those sessions, I told the [other] guys [in the band], 'Guys, this kind of cyclical thing that we're doing with making records for a year, touring for two years at that time, doing all this promo publicly,' it was just cyclical. It was, like, 'I've gotta stop. And I also wanna do my own thing. I have other artistic adventures that I wanna get on.'"He continued: "Part of it was we had so much creativity and input coming into the band, specifically with Daron's [Malakian, SYSTEM OF A DOWn guitarist and vocalist] songwriting and me wanting to bring in music as well, because, over time, he became a better lyricist and I became a better musical songwriter, a better composer, so it became kind of like a push and pull, which is really good for bands, actually, 'cause it's a yin-and-yang kind of thing — two strong, creative forces. And it also broken up so many bands. So, before 'Mezmerize' and 'Hypnotize,' I basically told the guys, 'Listen, I'd like to take a hiatus. I'm not saying I never wanna do this, but I'm saying I can't do this right now anymore. And I wanna do my own thing and also take time off and have a life, and all of that stuff.' It wasn't taken well at the time. I won't get into that. But years later, we started touring again in 2011, and it became a fun thing, 'cause it left... Nothing was totally resolved creatively, but it became a fun thing because we at least put everything to the side and said, 'Look, we're friends, we're brothers. We've known each other for a long time. We still respect and love each other. Let's go have fun and tour together.' And we've been doing that since. Not as much as they would like, let's say, or I'm not gonna speak for each and every person of the band, because that wouldn't be fair to me either. But generally I'm the least person that wants to tour. Part of that is physical, because it's tiring. I've done it for, 20, 25 years, and I had back surgery a few years ago. I'm much better now and all of that. But part of it is that. Part of it is that it's artistically redundant after a while, because it's 'Groundhog Day'; you're repeating yourself. David Bowie said the first two weeks of every tour is basically — I'm paraphrasing — creative; after that, it's redundant, kind of thing, which is correct. So it's that. But I do enjoy playing with the guys, and when it's a one-off, it's actually fun, 'cause there's no pressure to do the whole rigamarang of a long tour or press or anything. You just rehearse together, make your dumb jokes, have food together, and then go and play that one show and it becomes a hoorah. So that's what we've been doing. And I'm grateful for that."Tankian, who was promoting his memoir, "Down With The System", previously addressed how his relationship with Malakian has evolved over the years, particularly as it relates to their collaborative partnership, earlier that same month in an interview with Tom Power, host of "Q" on Canada's CBC Radio One. He said: "Well, changing the dynamic is basically years of time and the progression of the band, the success of the band, everything that happened in between the day that we met and now, basically, so 25, 30 years. A lot changes in that time. And so I think that's a part of it."Daron's been a lifer and he's incredibly serious about his music and he's incredibly protective of his music and vulnerable due to his music," Serj explained. "All of those things kind of go together. So it's those things, I think, that created some of the creative differences that we started finding. And it's also our progression. Listen, when Daron and I started working together, I didn't really write a lot of instrumental music — I mostly wrote lyrics; I was the lyricist; I was the singer. And he didn't write any lyrics; he just wrote music. But as time pressed and I played more musical instruments and I started becoming a songwriter/composer and he started writing more lyrics, we started kind of covering our own territory. And I would joke that, if he wrote lyrics, I was trying to encourage him to write more, because I believe in artistic growth. I believe in progression. I don't believe in things staying the same way, for music's sake. Otherwise the music becomes the same thing over and over again. That progression is necessary in every artist's life or in every group's life. So I was very encouraging of that. And I just wish that I got some of that back. And so that wasn't the case, and it was disappointing. And it became a creative difference over the band's path, and whatnot, over time."Asked why he wanted to write about this in his book, Serj said: "A lot of it has been publicized in a very sensationalist format by media, music media mostly, and I kind of wanted to put it in a proper perspective and grounding perspective, but with love and with balance and understanding that these things happen. This is normal. You have a relationship and you have differences in opinion as [to] how you wanna go forward, whether it's a band or a marriage or whatever it is. And these things happen. And so I wanted to take that aspect out, I wanted to take the sensationalist aspect out of the whole thing and be, like, this is not only what happened, but this is how I see things."Tankian also addressed the fact that SYSTEM OF A DOWn has toured intermittently since ending its hiatus in 2011, but has only managed to record two songs in the last 19 years, "Protect The Land" and "Genocidal Humanoidz". Released in November 2020, the tracks were motivated by the conflict between Artsakh and Azerbaijan, with all proceeds supporting humanitarian efforts in SYSTEM OF A DOWn's ancestral homeland of Armenia. Along with other donations from fans on their social pages, they raised over $600,000. "We haven't been making new music," Serj said. "We only put out two songs when the invasion of Artsakh, Nagorno Karabakh happened in 2020 by Azerbaijan, because we felt like the Azeri trolls, the government-sponsored trolls were taking over social media and the news networks, and the victims of these attacks weren't getting the word out. So we became kind of obsessed with getting the word out, because we were seeing our people suffer. So we put out those two songs because of that and we donated a lot of the proceeds for that to the cause as well."Asked how he balances the love and obligation he might feel toward his fans, those who love SYSTEM OF A DOWn, and the internal struggles within the band, Tankian said: "That's an incredibly smart question. It's really hard catering — when you're an artist, it's really hard catering. If you're an entertainer, catering is [what you do], but if you're an artist, then you're just creating what comes to you. You're almost unaware of what people want. Yes, if it's something heavier, you know people are gonna like it more. But if you're a good songwriter, you could do both. I do orchestral music, I do film music, I do rock music — I do it all. So I enjoy 'em all, but I know that if I do rock, more people are going to listen to it than a piano, instrumental or orchestral piece of music, soundtrack kind of music. But it doesn't mean that you don't do both, as an artist. So it's hard to really cater to people's feelings. What I love is, and I know that I can speak for the rest of the guys in the band, that no matter what's going on with our creative difference or the band not making new music or not touring fully or whatever, everyone's incredibly appreciative of what we have in terms of the love that we get from our fans and the way that people react to our music and the way that we get all these e-mails about how it's changed people's lives and all of that stuff, and that is mind-blowing. It's the biggest honor. And when I meet people on the street, I'm still incredibly honored that someone would pick me out and look at me in a positive light, not knowing who I am personally, but knowing me through my music, through our music, let's say. And I think that's a great fucking honor. I feel blessed for it. But it doesn't mean that that thing should continue forever either."I find more on System of a Down System Of A Down is back with 6 shows across 3 major cities in 2025. Here's everything you need to know about the band and their musical journey. System of a Down is renowned for its genre-defying sound, combining elements of thrash metal, alternative metal, and other genres to create a unique, powerful music experience. Their sound is characterized by fast-paced, aggressive guitar riffs and an overall intensity that defines their musical identity. Over the years, System of a Down has built a legacy of pushing boundaries with its bold fusion of metal and alternative influences. Formed in the mid-1990s in California, System of a Down was the brainchild of four Armenian-American musicians: Serj Tankian (vocals), Daron Malakian (guitar/vocals), Shavo Odadjian (bass), and John Dolmayan (drums). The band's formation was influenced by the political climate of the time and their desire to create music that was both meaningful and rebellious. Their self-titled debut album, released in 1998, marked the beginning of their meteoric rise to fame. System of a Down's music is instantly recognizable due to their heavy guitar work and the unique melodies they blend into their songs. The band's sound is never confined to one specific style or genre; instead, they incorporate a wide range of musical influences, from punk rock to classical music, making their tracks unpredictable and dynamic. One of the defining features of System of a Down's work is its political lyrics. Their songs often address social and political issues, including war, human rights, and governmental corruption. This thought-provoking approach has made them an influential voice in the rock and metal scenes, as their music not only entertains but also challenges listeners to think critically about the world around them. The band's genre-defying sound means that each album they release brings something fresh and innovative to the table, which has kept them at the forefront of the rock and metal genres for over two decades. Their ability to seamlessly blend complex rhythms, soaring melodies, and powerful, politically charged lyrics sets them apart as one of the most distinctive bands in the world. Attending a System of a Down concert in 2025 promises to be a thrilling experience for fans of all ages. Here's what you can expect during their highly anticipated tour.
