Consider the kitchen of a spreading old house in a country town. A great black stove is its main feature;but there is also a big round table and a fireplace with two rocking chairs placed in front of it.Just today the fireplace commenced its seasonal roar. 2 A woman with shorn white hair is standing at the kitchen window.She is wearing tennis shoes and a shapeless gray sweater over a summery calico dress. She is small and sprightly, like a bantam hen; but, due to a long youthful illness,her shoulders are pitifully hunched Her face is remarkable -not unlike Lincoln's, craggy like that, and tinted by sun and wind;but it is delicate too, finely boned, and her eyes are sherry-colored and timid. "Oh my," she exclaims, her breath smoking the windowpane, "It's fruitcake weather!" 3 The person to whom she is speaking is myself. I am seven; she is something. We are cousins, very distant ones, and we have lived together as long as I can remember. Other people inhabit the house, relatives.and though they have power over us, and frequently make us cry, we are not, on the too much aware of them. We are each other's best friend. She calls me Buddy, in memory of a boy who was formerly her best friend. The other Buddy died in the 1880's when she was still a child. She is still a child. 4 "I knew it before I got out of bed," she says, turning away from the society with a purposeful excitement in her eyes. "The courthous bell sounded so cold and there were no birds singing they've gone to warmer country yes indeed. Oh, Buddy, stop stuffing biscuit and fetch our buggy Help me find my hat. We've thirty cakes to bake. Which detail in the excerpt supports the theme that memories should be cherished and kept alive? A. The narrator and his cousin each have a rocking chair by the fire. B.
