Dachshunds are energetic, lovable small dogs known for their short legs, varied coat textures, and strong prey drive. Originally bred in Germany for hunting, dachshunds are protective and make excellent watchdogs, though their loud bark might be bothersome. They are prone to certain health issues like intervertebral disc disease and diabetes, requiring attentive care and regular exercise to prevent obesity. The dachshund (pronounced dahks-hund) is an energetic and lovable small dog breed from Germany. It is known for its varied coat textures and colors, short legs, floppy ears, and prominent chest. This dog is affectionately called a doxie, wiener dog, hotdog, or sausage dog, and this cute pint-size breed definitely leaves a lasting impression. The dachshund is bred as standard or miniature size, but the traits of this breed are similar for both. Despite their size, the dachshund tends to be quite protective and alert, so the breed can also make an excellent watchdog. They bark loudly, though, so they can disturb your neighbors if you live close to them. Even though their bark can alert you to things going on outside your home, it might not always be welcomed. Affection LevelHighFriendlyLowExercise NeedsMediumTrainabilityMediumIntelligenceMediumTendency to BarkHighAmount of SheddingMedium The dachshund originated in Germany as a hunting dog. Though their origins can be traced as far back as the 15th century, the breed's development really began in 17th century Germany. Called dachshunds, which translates as "badger dogs," these short hounds did just thatthey hunted badgers. Their stature, determination, and independence were ideal for digging, entering tunnels, and of course, fighting badgers. Their flap-down ears help keep dirt and debris out when burrowing. Further development of the breed created two sizes. Historically, the standard size continued to hunt badgers as well as wild boar, while the miniatures pursued have and foxes. There's also a middle-size dachshund in Germany. Dachshunds were brought to the U.S. as early as 1885 when the breed was recognized by the American Kennel Club (AKC), but increased in popularity in the 1930s and 1940s. To prevent them from being ostracized during World War II, they were temporarily called badger dogs in the U.S. They remain extremely popular dogs to this day. Dachshund races, known as "wiener races," are popular in some places for amusement. However, these are opposed by the Dachshund Club of America out of concerns over whether racing might injure the dogs. are tenacious, which was good in hunting dogs, but they might annoy you with this trait at home. The propensity to dig may result in damage to your pet. Dachshunds have a high prey drive, so they may not be a good match for a household that includes pet rodents or other small animals. They usually get along well with other dachshunds but tend to want to be the top dog in a multi-pet household. Dachshunds are naturally prone to developobesity. To avoid weight gain, your dachshund should get regularexercise. Daily walks are recommended, with a couple of 10-minute walks per day at the minimum, plus some playtime, such as playing fetch. Butproper nutritionis also key and you should be sure to avoid overfeeding. The grooming needsof the dachshund depend upon their hair coat. The longhaired variety requires daily brushing but does not typically need professional grooming. Smooth dachshunds have a higher shedding rate than other varieties. All dachshunds should receivebathsas needed (frequently if skin problems exist). And when its cold outside, your doxie might benefit from wearing a sweater that will keep them warm. Be sure to do regularnail trimsin order to prevent problems with the paws. Those flap-down ears also need attention, so keep clean and monitor for signs of infection or mites. Maintain good oral hygiene by brushing your dog's teeth a couple of times a week. While loved for their bold personality, the dachshunds are also known for their tendency to bark. Properobedience trainingcan turn these potential problems into beneficial qualities. Dachshunds can be difficult to housebreak. You will need to be persistent and you may wish to use crate training. Be prepared with puppy pads and cleaning supplies. Responsible breedersstrive to maintain the highest breed standards are less likely to inherit health conditions. However, some hereditary health problems can occur in the breed. The following are some conditions to be aware of:Intervertebral disc disease: You'll need to take care to protect your dachshund's back. As many as 25% of dachshunds have intervertebral disc disease, which can result in their spinal discs deteriorating and being susceptible to bulging when they have back strain or injury.Diabetes mellitus: This is a common chronic, but manageable disease found in younger and older dogs that have an abnormal response to insulin. Excessive thirst and weight loss are two early symptoms. Epilepsy: This disease of the brain causes seizures in dogs. There are no known causes of this disease. Gastric dilatation-volvulus: Commonly known as bloat, this emergency problem typically occurs in larger breeds, but dachshunds have large chests which put them at risk for this problem, too. The stomach cavity becomes trapped with gas or air that the dog cannot expel. Acanthosis nigricans: Portions of the dog's skin can become darkened and thickened. This disease may be caused by allergies or hormones, and it can be controlled. Credit: The Spruce / Kelly Miller The amount of food needed will depend on the size of your dachshund, activity level, age, and other factors. These multifaceted pups are not always the biggest fans of other dogs or cats (though some might not mind). They usually do best in homes without babies or younger kids, since they have very fragile necks and backs and need to be handled carefully to avoid injuries. If you do have kids, a Dachshund is doable, but keep in mind that a child who plays too roughly could seriously injure your Doxie. Early socialization and training is very important, and you should always supervise kids and Dachshunds together. These confident pups like to bark, so if you have an apartment with neighbors coming and pups arent couch potatoes, but they also arent hyperactive, and their short legs arent meant for intense exercise. Instead, Doxies will enjoy a casual walk every day and appreciate having time to take in new smells outdoors. Dachshunds origins date back more than 600 years to Germany, where they were bred to hunt badgers. In fact, their name is German for badger dog. Their narrow, low-to-the-ground body was perfect for digging into tunnels, and their confident, brave personalities made them ready for the job. Their loud bark was meant to alert their humans whenever they found badgers underground. Depending on where they lived, Doxies were bred for three different coats: The original coat was short and smooth, but some were bred to have longer coats for colder climates. Others were bred to have wiry coats to help them avoid thorns when they worked in regions with briar patches. Dachshunds were first recognized by the American Kennel Club (AKC) in 1885. But during World War I, Doxies were used in German propaganda. As a result, the AKC temporarily rebranded them as Badger Dogs or Liberty Pups in the U.S. Theyre now widely beloved dogs known by their original moniker. There are numerous clubs dedicated to them, including the Dachshund Club of America. A Dachshund puppy can cost as much as $3,500. If you choose this route, pick a responsible breeder. Whether you are an experienced dog owner or a first-time pet parent, the Dachshund breed offers something special. From their playful antics to their loyal nature, these dogs have become cherished family pets across the world. Dachshunds come in a variety of types that differ in size, coat types, and personality traits. Understanding these variations is essential in choosing the right dog for your home. With three primary coat types and multiple sizes, the Dachshund can adapt to a variety of living situations.

whether in an apartment or a home with a yard. In this guide, well explore the different types of Dachshund breed offers a unique set of characteristics across its various types, from the energetic Miniature Dachshund to the elegant Long-Haired Dachshund.
While all Dachshunds share certain traits, such as their independent nature and strong prey drive, the differences in coat types, size, and grooming requirements can help potential owners make an informed decision. Miniature Dachshunds are small and energetic, ideal for active individuals or families. Long-haired dachshunds have a calm temperament but still need regular exercise. Smooth Dachshunds have low-maintenance coats. Long-haired dachshunds need frequent brushing. Wire-haired dachshunds are perfect for apartments, weighing under 11 pounds. Standard Dachshunds, weighing 16-32 pounds, need more space and exercise. When choosing the right Dachshund, its important to consider several factors. The first thing to think about is the size of the dog. Standard Dachshunds are larger and weigh between 16 and 32 pounds, while Miniature Dachshunds typically weigh under 11 pounds. A smaller loving space, but both types still require exercise and mental stimulation. Next, consider the coat type. If you prefer a low-maintenance companion, the Smooth Dachshund might be ideal due to its minimal grooming needs. However, if youre willing to invest time in grooming, the Long-Haired or Wire-Haired or Wireunique and beautiful. Additionally, keep in mind the dogs personality traits. Dachshunds can be stubborn and independent, so training will require patience and consistency. However, they are intelligent and can thrive in homes where they are given plenty of mental and physical stimulation. The Standard Dachshund is the original version of the breed and is typically the first dog that comes to mind when most people think of a Dachshund. These dogs usually weigh between 16 and 32 pounds, with their long bodies and short legs making them instantly recognizable. Historically bred as hunting dogs, they were used to track down small prey like rabbits and badgers, giving them a fearless, strong-willed personality Despite their small stature, they possess a lot of energy and courage. Standard Dachshunds are highly intelligent dogs, but they can be independent and a bit stubborn, making training a challenge. Early socialization is key to ensuring that these dogs are well-behaved and confident in new environments. They are loyal to their families and enjoy being the center of attention. However, due to their long spines, they are more prone to back issues like intervertebral disc disease. It is essential to keep them at a healthy weight, avoid excessive jumping, and ensure they get regular exercise to stay fit and healthy. The Standard Dachshund comes in three main coat types: smooth, long-haired, and wire-haired, each with its own grooming needs. Regardless of coat type, they all share similar personalitieslively, fun-loving, and incredibly affectionate. With the proper training and care, Standard Dachshunds can make excellent family pets. Miniature Dachshunds are a smaller variation of the breed, typically weighing under 11 pounds. Though smaller in size, they share the same strong personality traits as their larger counterparts. These dogs were also bred for hunting, but their focus was on smaller animals. Despite their small stature, Miniature Dachshunds are brave, curious, and highly energetic. They have a confident nature and often believe they are much bigger than they really are, which makes them excellent watchdogs. Training Miniature Dachshunds can be challenging, as they tend to be independent and can have a stubborn streak. However, they are incredibly intelligent and can be taught commands with patience and consistency. These dogs do best in homes where they are given plenty of attention, mental stimulation, and regular exercise. Because of their a separate breed, these tiny Dachshunds are particularly energetic and have a strong prey drive, which means they love to chase small animals and are always on the go. Due to their small size and energy, Rabbit Dachshunds are independent and stubborn, so early training and socialization are essential. Although not officially classified as a separate type by major kennel clubs, Rabbit Dachshunds can come in different coat typessmooth, long-haired, or wire-haired. Their size and energetic nature make them a bit more difficult to handle, so they are not always recommended for first-and the rare double dapple dachshund variety. While their coat doesnt require much care, these dogs still need regular exercise and mental stimulation to stay healthy and happy. As per Purina, Smooth Dachshunds are intelligent dogs with an independent nature, which can make training a challenge. They are known for being loyal, but they can also be a bit stubborn, requiring patience and consistency in training. Early socialization is important to ensure that they grow up to be well-adjusted and well-behaved pets. Though they are smaller in size, Smooth Dachshunds are energetic and love to explore their environment. Regular exercise, including walks and playtime, is crucial to prevent them from becoming bored or overweight. Smooth Dachshunds are great companions for families, singles, and elderly individuals alike. Their manageable grooming needs, combined with their affectionate nature, make them a popular choice for many dog owners. However, like all Dachshunds, they are prone to back problems, so its important to ensure they dont gain excessive weight or strain their backs. Long-haired Dachshunds are known for their luxurious, flowing coats. Their silky coats give them an elegant appearance, but this also means that they need regular brushing to prevent matting and tangling. they have a calm and affectionate personality, often being slightly more reserved than their smooth or wire-haired regular brushing, especially during shedding seasons. Long-haired Dachshunds are known for being gentle and playtime to stay fit and avoid gaining excess weight. In terms of health, Long-Haired Dachshunds are easily identified by their rough, wiry coats, which require regular grooming to maintain their distinctive texture. This coat type tends to shed less than smooth coats, but it does require hand-stripping or regular clipping to keep it in good condition. Wire-haired Dachshunds are known for their energetic and playful nature. They are more extroverted compared to other Dachshund types, making them a good choice for active families or individuals who are looking for a more playful, high-energy dog. Wire-haired Dachshunds are incredibly intelligent and can be trained, though they tend to be a bit more independent and stubborn. They were originally bred to hunt small game-like badgers and are fearless, so they may sometimes display a strong prey drive. Early socialization is key to ensuring they develop into well-behaved pets who can live with other dogs and pets. Despite their energetic and spirited nature, Wire-Haired Dachshunds require sleek, shiny coat that requires minimal grooming. These delightful dogs are beloved for their independent yet affectionate nature, making them great companions for families or individuals. Their short coats dont require regular brushing, though periodic care is essential to maintain healthy skin and prevent potential issues like hair loss. Despite their low maintenance grooming needs, they still require regular exercise to ensure a healthy weight and to maintain their playful energy. Short-haired dachshunds are often referred to as badger dogs due to their historical role in hunting badgers, wild boars, and other small animals. Their elongated bodies and short legs make them agile hunters, though today, many certain health issues, including joint problems and intervertebral disc disease (IVDD), due to their long spines. To ensure a long, healthy life, a balanced diet and regular vet check-ups are essential. As with all Dachshunds, responsible breeders often conduct genetic testing to help identify potential health problems. Their floppy ears, a distinctive feature, may

Though the breed is famous for its use in exterminating badgers and badger-baiting, dachshunds were also commonly used for rabbit and fox hunting, for locating wounded deer, and in packs were known to hunt game as large as wild boar and as fierce as the wolverine. [64] There are huge differences of opinion as to when dachshund was bred in the 15th century, while the Dachshund Club of America states that foresters bred the dogs in the 18th or 19th century.[citation needed]Double-dapple dachshunds, which are prone to eye disease, blindness, or hearing problems, are generally believed to have been introduced to the United States between 1879 and 1885.[65][66]The flap-down ears and famous curved tail of the dachshund have deliberately been bred into the dog. In the case of the ears, this is to keep grass seeds, dirt, and other matter from entering the ear canal. The curved tail is dual-purposed: to be seen more easily in long grass and, in the case of burrowing dachshund, the oldest style, may be a cross between the German Shorthaired Pointer, a Pinscher, and a Bracke (a type of bloodhound), or to have been produced by crossing a short Bruno Jura Hound with a pinscher; others believe it was a cross from a miniature French pointer and a pinscher, [29] Others believe that they were descended from Basset Hounds, based upon their scent abilities and general appearance. [69] The exact origins of the Dachshund are therefore unknown. According to William Loeffler, from The American Book of the Dachshund are therefore unknown. selectively breeding these animals, breeders eventually produced a dog which consistently produced long-haired dachshund was developed by breeding smooth dachshunds with various land and water spaniels. The long-haired dachshund may be a cross among the Schnauzer, the Dandie Dinmont Terrier, the Germany Wirehaired Pointer, or perhaps the Scottish Terrier. [29]See also: Stereotypes of Germany World War I, the dachshund's popularity in the United States plummeted because of this association. As a result, they were often called "liberty hounds", just as "liberty cabbage" became a term for sauerkraut mostly in North America. [72] The stigma of the association was revived to a lesser extent during World War II, though it was comparatively short-lived. Kaiser Wilhelm II and German field marshal Erwin Rommel were known for keeping dachshunds. Owing to the association of the breed with Germany, as well as its particular popularity among dog keepers in Munich, with the name Waldi. [73] In the German sitcom Hausmeister Krause, the main protagonist, Dieter Krause, is portrayed as a typical German square and fuddy-duddy, who embodies many German stereotypes, and his obsession for dachshunds in Germany.[74]A smooth dachshund in an organized raceSome people train and enter their dachshunds to compete in dachshund races, such as the Wiener Nationals. Several races across the United States routinely draw several thousand attendees. [75]Despite the popularity of these events, the Dachshund Club of America opposes "wiener racing", as many greyhound tracks use the events to draw large crowds to their facilities. The DCA is also worried about potential injuries to dogs, owing to their predisposition to back injuries. Another favorite sport is earthdog trials, in which dachshunds enter tunnels with dead ends and obstacles attempting to locate either an artificial bait or live but caged (and thus protected) rats. [76] In Germany, dachshunds are widely called Dackel (both singular and plural). Among hunters, they are mainly referred to as Teckel. There are kennels which specialize in breeding hunting dachshunde, the so-called jagdliche Leistungszucht ("hunting-related performance breeding") or Gebrauchshundezucht ("working dog breeding"), as opposed to breeding family dogs. Therefore, it is sometimes incorrectly believed that Teckel is either a name for the hunting breed or a mark for passing the test for a trained hunting dog (called "VGP", "Verband-Gebrauchsprfung") in Germany.[77]Dachshunds are one of the most popular with urban and apartment dwellers, ranking among the top 10 most popular breeds in 76 of 190 major US cities surveyed by the AKC.[79]There are organized local dachshund clubs in most major American Kennel Club found the Dachshund to be the 6th most popular dog breed.[81]In artDie Dackelfamilie mit Jger puppy while touring Europe in 1937 for his then-girlfriend Olivia. The puppy, named Dunker, never left Germany after Kennedy started to get allergic reactions.[82]Grover Cleveland, the 22nd and 24th President, had a dachshund in the White House.[83]William Randolph Hearst was an avid lover of dachshunds. When his own dachshund Helena died, he eulogized her in his "In The News" column.[84]Fred, E. B. White's dachshund, appeared in many of his famous essays.[85]Lump (pronounced [lmp]; German for "rascal"), the pet of Pablo Picasso, who was thought to have inspired some of his artwork. Picasso & Lump tells the story of Picasso and Lump, Jack Ruby, the killer of Lee Harvey Oswald, had a dachshund named Sheba, which he often referred to as his wife.[86] At the time he murdered Oswald, he had four of themalthough he once had as many as 10.[86] And warnol had a pair of dachshunds, Archie and Amos, whom he depicted in his paintings and mentioned frequently in his diaries.[87] Stanley and Boodgie, immortalized on canvas by owner David Hockney, and published in the book David Hockney's Dog Days.[88]Wadl and Hexl, Kaiser Wilhelm II's famous ferocious pair. Upon arriving at Archduke Franz Ferdinand's country seat, Konopit castle, on a semi-official visit, they promptly proceeded to do away with one of the Austro-Hungarian heir presumptive's priceless golden pheasants, thereby almost causing an international incident.[89] Another one of his beloved dachshunds, Senta, is currently buried at Huis Doorn, Wilhelm's manor in the Netherlands.[90]In Zelenogorsk, Russia, a parade of dachshund monument every July 25 to commemorate the day the city was founded.[91]Joe was the dachshund of General Claire Lee Chennault, commander of the Flying Tigers and then the China Air Task Force of the US Army Air Forces, and became the mascot of those organizations. [92] Maxie, a dachshund owned by actress Marie Prevost, tried to awaken his dead mistress, who was found with small bites on her legs. Maxie's barking eventually summoned neighbors to the scene. The incident inspired the 1977 Nick Lowe song "Marie Prevost", [93] Liliane Kaufmann, wife of Edgar J. Kaufmann who commissioned the home Fallingwater from Frank Lloyd Wright in 1935, was a well-known breeder and owner of long-haired dachshunds. At the Fallingwater bookstore, visitors are able to purchase a book titled Moxie, which is about one of the dachshunds who lived at Fallingwater.[94] Liliane raised long-haired dachshunds and they traveled from Pittsburgh to Bear Run with her.[95] Her 80th birthday, celebrated in 2020, was marked by posing with one of her favourites (Lilia) on the grounds of Fredensborg Castle [98]Obie is a dachshund who became infamous for his obesity, weighing as much as 77 pounds (35 kilograms), more than twice a normal-weight standard dachshund [99][100] He reached his target weight of 28lb (13kg) in July 2013.

[101]Carole Lombard and Clark Gable had a dachshund named Commissioner.[102]Crusoe the Celebrity Dachshund gained fame on social media. In 2015, Crusoe came out with his The New York Times best-selling book titled Crusoe: The Worldly Wiener Dog. At the 9th annual Shorty Awards, Crusoe won the best animal category. [104] In 2018, Crusoe won the People's Choice Awards Animal Star of 2018. [105] English singer-songwriter Adele has a dachshund named Louis Armstrong. [106] Valerie, an 8-pound dachshund, gained notoriety in the media after surviving 529 days in wilderness. In November 2023 Valerie went missing from her owners in Kangaroo Island, South Australia. Despite extensive searches by her owners and locals, she wasn't found. Approximately 500 days after her disappearance, sightings of Valerie emerged. A volunteer rescue effort was coordinated by conservationists, which spanned more than 1,000 hours and covered more than 3,000 miles to capture the elusive pet dog. Valerie was finally caught alive and well in April 2025. It is hypothesized Valerie has survived remote conditions by subsisting on small carrion and fecal matter.[107]Dogs portalList of dog breedsNintendogs: Dachshund [usurped] in Oxford Dictionaries^ "Dachshund Definition and More from the majority of Dachshunds are healthy dogs.", "akc org health": "Generally a healthy breed, the Dachshund can be expected to live 12 to 16 years with proper care, so long as he's kept on a good diet and has enough exercise to maintain good muscle tone. To prevent disc damage to the Dachshund's long back, be vigilant about keeping him from becoming overweight, and always monitor his activities to avoid back injury. Like most dogs with drop ears, Dachshund not be allowed to become overweight. This is not only because of general health reasons, but also to avoid strain to the Dachshund's long back, which can lead to slipped or ruptured (herniated) discs. Ignore the pleading eyes, and give only the recommended amount given by the manufacturer of the quality dog food of your choice. Give table scraps very sparingly, if at all, especially avoiding cooked bones and foods with high fat content. Remember that the Dachshund's nose can get him into trouble, and always keep food well out of his reach.", "akc_org_grooming": "Dachshunds are moderate shedders, relatively clean, and have little or no body odor. The breed's grooming needs vary with a towel or hound glove to look dapper.

 Longhaired Dachshunds may require more frequent brushing, depending on the thickness of the coat. The Wirehaired coat can be plucked or hand-stripped several times a year to look its best, but beyond that is easy to maintain between groomings with occasional trimming of the beard and eyebrows and brushing or combing once or twice a week. All Dachshunds should have their nails trimmed every month.", "akc org exercise": "Many owners think that because they are so small, Dachshunds don't require more exercise than just running around the house. However, they do need regular exercise than just running around the house. However, they do need regular exercise than just running around the house. moderate length should be sufficient. To avoid injury, never allow your Dachshunds don't do well as outdoor dogs'they want to be with their humans.", "akc org training": "Dachshunds are very intelligent but are also independent and often stubborn, so they can be a challenge to train. They love to give and receive affection and do best with positive, reward-based training. They are sensitive and will not react well to harsh commands or punishment. Patience and consistence are key. Dachshunds have an excellent sense of smell as well as a strong prey drive. Because they were bred to stay focused and follow a trail without distraction, if they are busy with something more interesting they may not always pay attention to you.","test 4":"","test 5":"","test 5":"","test 6":"","test 6":"","test 6":"","test 9":"","test 9":","test 9":"","test 9":"","test 9":","test 9":","tes

The eyes are of medium size, almond-shaped and dark-rimmed, with an energetic, pleasant expression; not piercing; very dark in color. The bridge bones over the eyes are strongly prominent. Wall eyes, except in the case of dappled dogs, are a serious fault. The ears are set near the top of the head, not too far forward, of moderate length, rounded, not narrow, pointed, or folded. Their carriage, when animated, is with the forward edge just touching the cheek so that the ears frame the face. The skull is slightly arched, neither too broad nor too narrow, and slopes gradually with little perceptible stop into the finely-formed, slightly arched muzzle, giving a Roman appearance. Lips are tightly stretched, well covering the lower jaw. Nostrils well open. Jaws opening wide and hinged well back of the eyes, with strongly developed bones and teeth. Teeth-Powerful canine teeth; teeth fit closely together in a scissors bite. An even bite is a minor fault.   body was custom-made for this dirty subterranean work. For a dog of any size, a badger is a formidable adversary, weighing anywhere from 25 to 40 pounds, with razor-sharp teeth and claws. The cleverness, courage, perseverance, and strength that are hallmarks of today's Dachshund were first bred into his long-ago ancestors to best equip them for battling a deadly foe. The little dog's surprisingly loud, houndy bark is also a throwback to his working roots: It allowed the Dachshund's above-ground human hunting partner to mark his hound's underground location. In addition to the breed's short, smooth coat, selective breeding produced types with wire coats for work in thorny brier patches, and long coats for cold climates. Dachshunds of various sizes were bred to work on different kinds of quarry. Packs of Dachshunds, according to breed authorities, were often used on wild boar. By the late 1800s, the process of standardizing the breed according to size, coat, and color varieties was well underway. The Dachshund has long been a national symbol of Germany, so closely associated with the fatherland that during World War I American fanciers took to calling them Liberty Hounds due to anti-German sentiment. In the United States, Dachshunds are either miniature (11 pounds and under as an adult) or standard (usually between 16 and 32 pounds as an adult). If your Dachshund weighs between 11 and 16 pounds, hes called a tweenie. Other countries have a wider variance in the sizes. For example, in Germany, the official birthplace of the Dachshund breed, Dachshunds are identified as Standard Miniature, or Kaninchenteckel, based on a chest measurement taken at the age of fifteen months. No matter their size, Dachshunds are a delightful addition to any family, so they have ranked near the top of most popular dog lists since the 1950s. Their cute appearance and lively disposition have inspired many affectionate nicknames for the breed, including wiener dog, hot dog, sausage dog, Doxie, Dashie, and (especially in Germany) Teckels, Dachshund, proudly carrying his long, muscular body on short legs, his elongated head held high with a bold, intelligent look in his eyes. Because of their almost comical appearance, Dachshunds have long been a favorite subject of cartoonists and toy makers. But their cute appearance was developed for far more serious and practical reasons. Their short legs enable them to dig and maneuver through tunnels to corner and even fight badgers and other animals, while their large chests give them plenty of heart for the fight. Dachshunds are brave but can be somewhat stubborn and have an independent spirit, especially when hunting. At home, the Dachshunds playful nature comes out. He loves to be close to you and help you tie your shoes. Because of his intelligence, he often has his own ideas about what the rules are when it comes to play. Those rules may not be the same as yours or even other breeds of dogs.
Dachshunds are known for being lively and enjoy chasing other small animals, birds, and toys. The Dachshund is clever, lively, and courageous to the point of rashness, persevering in above and below ground work, with all the senses well-developed. Any display of shyness is a serious fault. Dachshunds have a loud, deep bark that sounds as though it comes from a much larger dog. And they do like to bark, which you might consider if you have neighbors who could be annoyed rather than amused by the antics of your brave little Dachshunds often bond closely with a single person. They may even become jealous of their owners attention and can become snappy if not properly trained and socialized. Smooth Dachshunds are the most popular variety in the United States. Their coats are short and shiny and need little grooming. They do, however, need a sweater in the winter if you live in an area with cold weather. Common colors are red, cream, black and tan, b

  Wirehaired Dachshunds have wiry, short, thick, rough coats with bushy eyebrows and a beard. Like Smooth Dachshunds, they often are mischievous. They wont need a sweater in the winter, but they do need to be brushed regularly to prevent mats from forming. Their coat colors can be the same as the Smooth Dachshund, but the most popular colors in the United States are wild boar (a mixture of black, brown, and gray), black and tan, and various shades of red. Dachshunds often have been seen as a symbol of Germany. Because of this association, Dachshunds lost popularity in the United States during World War I and II. However, their appeal was too great for this to resist, and they quickly made a comeback in popularity. Because of the association with Germany, a Dachshund named Waldi was chosen to be the first official mascot for the 1972 Summer Olympics. Dachshunds are a good choice for apartment dwellers and people who dont have a backyard. They are popular with urban dwellers because of their small size and ease of care. They generally are active indoors and also enjoy going on walks. Just be careful not to let them get too fat or allow them to injure their backs, which can result in partial or full paralysis.
Although they were originally bred to hunt ferocious badgers and other animals, todays Dachshunds are ideal family companions. Additionally, many people show them in conformation, obedience, agility, field trials, and earth dog trials. They are also hard-working and well-appreciated therapy dogs. Some people enter their Dachshunds in Dachshund races, such as the Wiener Nationals. Although these races are popular, the Dachshund Club of America opposes wiener racing because they are such a popular breed, many people breed Dachshunds to make money rather than out of a love for the breed and a desire to breed healthy, even-tempered dogs. Be careful to obtain your Dachshund from a reputable breeder who screens his or her breeding animals for temperament and health problems. The Dachshund is a versatile companion. The Dachshund suits almost anyone with their various sizes, colors, coat types, and personalities. Dachshund Rescue Information: The Dachshund is a long, short-legged dog with a temperament similar to that of a terrier. Dachshunds are well suited to apartment life but need exercise, and it is important that they not be overfed as this breed is prone to weight gain. Dachshund Trivia: Dachshunds are good travel companions. Dachshunds are good travel companions. Dachshunds are dogs were bred to hunt. The short legs of a Dachshund are well suited for digging and getting inside badger burrows. Dachshunds are often referred to as wiener dogs because of their shape. Oueen Victoria was fond of Dachshunds.
