'Thou hast shaved many a poor soul close enough,' said the other; 'thou art only meeting thy reward': so he played up another tune. Then the miser began to beg and promise, and the miser began to began to began to be a second promise, and the miser began to began to be a second promise, and the miser began to be a second promise and the miser began to be a second pr he offered a round hundred of florins that he had in his purse, and had just gained by cheating some poor fellow. The tune, played with precision and in exact time, began to thrill in the hearts of Nicholas and Natasha, arousing in them the same kind of sober mirth as radiated from Anisya Fedorovna's whole being. We haven't a camelty tune of our own To help us trollop along, But every neck is a hair trombone (Rtt-ta-ta-ta!"There isn't any reason why you fellows can't make them play a real tune. It's up to you, just according to how you pull the wires. We very, very seldom played the same old tune; it was a very pretty tune -how well I remember it -- I wonder when I shall ever get rid of it. When he had satisfied himself on the dead mouse (he never seemed really comfortable anywhere else), and, looking up at me with a merry twinkle in his eyes, he began. The great actress desires some one to tune her clavecin: - Harvey waked to find the "first half" at 'breakfast, the fo'c'sle door drawn to a crack, and every square inch of the schooner singing its own tune. The black bulk of the cook balanced behind the tiny galley over the glare of the stove, and the pots and pans in the pierced wooden board before it jarred and racketed to each plunge.- From the molten-golden notes, And all in tune, What a liquid ditty floats To the turtledove that listens, while she gloats On the moon!"Why, there's Solomon in the hall," said the Squire, "and playing my fav'rite tune, I believe--"The flaxen-headed ploughboy"-- he's for giving us a hint as we aren't enough in a hurry to hear him play. I could not endure it at first, but by and by it began to take hold of me, and now there is no tune which I like so well. It growls and grumbles and clicks and scratches so it spoils the music, and your machinery rumbles so that the racket drowns every tune you attempt." TUNEnoun1. Tune is a diversity of notes put together. John Locke Etymology: toon, Dut. ton, Swed. tuono, Ital. tone, Fr. tonus, Lat. Came he to sing a raven's note, Whose dismal tune bereft my vital pow'rs. William Shakespeare. Tunes and airs have in themselves some affinity with the affections; as merry tunes, doleful tunes, solemn tunes, tunes inclining mens minds to pity, warlike tunes; so that tunes have a predisposition to the motion of the spirits. Francis Bacon. Keep unsteddy nature to her law, And the low world in measur'd motion drawAfter the heav'nly tune, which none can hearOf human mould with gross unpurged ear. John Milton. That sweet song you sung one starry night, The tune I still retain, but not the words. Dryden. The disposition in the fiddle to play tunes. Scriblerus Club .2. Sound; note.
